MUSEUMHOUSE

Globe and Mail writer John Bentley Mays had the opportunity to visit MuseumHouse's penthouse with architect Sol Wassermuhl, to get "a vivid, real-world idea of what it would be like to call this place home." Bentley Mays writes about the prime location as being in the heart of Toronto, near the Royal Ontario Museum and the Art Gallery of Ontario — plus close to the shops of Yorkville and Bloor Street West. He adds: "Calling it home would also mean enjoying some of the best big-city, big-sky views available anywhere in Toronto." Indeed, the views are as stunning outside as they are inside. Each suite can be tailored to a variety of tastes, he says: "for people with imagination, or with the ability to hire imagination, the suite might be the large, empty canvas they've been looking for. Looking south through the tall glass walls of the living room or from the south-facing terrace, the eye is carried out over the roof of the Royal Ontario Museum, and across the leafy, low-rise cityscape of the University of Toronto's St. George campus and of the residential neighbourhoods beyond."
